ARMAÇÃO DE PÊRA

Armação de Pêra was a very special summer town for the Portuguese from the north & Lisbon to come for the summer months. Named after the way the fishermen would go out in 'armada fleets' to catch the tuna. On one of the Algarve's longest most glorious sandy beaches with many tiny fish restaurants it became one of the most popular summer destinations. 'Armação', still retains its old charm if you park along the waterfront & ignore the apartments at the back it is still well worth a visit. 5 minutes from Galé, 15 minutes from Albufeira.

The central part of the beach is called the 'Fisherman's beach'. Here, the small boats are still pulled up every morning, when the fishermen come in with their daily catch. The traditional siren still rings each time a boat arrives to let the people know that more fresh fish are arriving. It's amazing to see the assortment of fish, crabs, eels, octopus & various other water creatures the fishermen bring in their catch. By law they are not allowed to sell directly from their boats (but you do still see the odd plastic bag exchanging hands). Often they will come by with a bucket of 'clandestine' crabs for sale in buckets!

The old part of town, just behind the fisherman's beach has many tiny walking streets with pavement cafés, shops, restaurants & cinema. Just around the corner from Fisherman's beach, you'll find the lovely clothing shop 'Collections' (see the write-up on Armação de Pêra FREEMAP for further details).

Walkers at any time of the year can enjoy the long walk along the beach all the way towards Galé. Or head out & walk across the marshes to see the wildlife in the nature reserve. There's also a cliff top walk toward Carvoeiro, but be careful to stay well inside the edges of the cliffs!
